Dakota West Credit Union Outgrows Existing Building

By Tie Shank

Denton Zubke, CEO of Dakota West Credit Union, states "We are presently sitting on top of each other. The existing building is 4800 square feet and we need at least 7500 square feet."

Standing 3 stories tall and approximately 15,500 total square feet, the new building will offer plenty of room to meet the growing needs of the credit union and of the community. Dakota West Credit Union will share this building with five tenants: 1) Thrivent Financial 2) Attorney Rick Sand of Sand Law, PLLC and the other three remain tentative.

The hours of the new location will remain the same as the existing:

Lobby hours = Monday-Friday 8-5 and Saturday 8-noon

Drive up hours = Monday - Friday 8-5:30 and Saturday 8-noon

Carl Miller

Carl was born April 17, 1925, in Culbertson, MT to Fred and Anna (Damm) Miller. He was raised there until they moved to the Yellowstone Valley where they lived on various farms in the East Fairview and Dore area. Carl and two of his brothers were drafted into the army but he received a farm deferment because of the sugar shortage and he was needed on the family farm. While living at Dore, ND, near the Big Opening, they were neighbors to the Falkenhagen family and where Carl met the love of his life, Avis Falkenhagen. They were united in marriage on March 3, 1946, at St. John's Lutheran Church in Fairview, MT. They made their home on the Miller farm NE of Dore for two years until they purchased a farm and lived in a log house in the Big Opening. In 1957 they bought and moved to the Miller family farm SE of Fairview where Carl continued to live until 2013 when he entered the Bethel Lutheran Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Williston, ND.

Carl and Avis had six children who worked on the farm and helped with the many chores including milking cows, raising chickens, irrigating, and working in the sugar beet fields. Carl loved the farm and often worked long hours to keep it running. He shared his strong work ethic with his children and grandchildren. They loved having their grandchildren spend time on the farm and over the years many of their nieces and nephews would come to visit "Uncle Charlie and Aunt Avis". They always opened their door to anyone who wanted to experience and enjoy the outdoor life on the farm.

Carl also worked at the Holly Sugar beet factory for several winters. He was a member of St. John's Lutheran Church where he was a member of the choir in his earlier years. He and Avis loved to dance.

Carl Miller, 89, a longtime resident of McKenzie County, joined the Lord and his wife, Avis, on Tuesday, May 27, 2014, at the Bethel Lutheran Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Williston, ND. Carl will be remembered by many for his "Peace" signs and warm smile to greet those around him.

Carl is survived by three daughters; Sharon (Dale) Fessler, and Lois (Kent) Reiersen, both of Williston, ND, and Julie (Keith) Johnson of Colorado Springs, CO; two sons, Terry (Wanda) and Toby (Vicky) of Fairview; son-in-law, Bill Jacobson; 17 grandchildren; 26 great grandchildren and 1 great great grandchild; 3 sisters, Leona (Dale) Ost, Annabelle (Harlow) Bieber, Barb (Larry) Luger; 2 brothers, Robert and Leo (Shirley) Miller.

He was preceded in death by his parents, wife, daughter Charlotte Jacobson, grandson Jonathan Miller, great grandson Jackson Miller; 4 brothers, Bill, Albert, Alfred, and Jim; 2 sisters, Freda Andrews and Pauline Damm.

Bakken Brew Fest Donates to MonDak Heritage Center

The MonDak Heritage Center recently received a $5000 donation from the Bakken Brew Fest hosted by the Sidney Area Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture. Jenny Baker, Education and Outreach Coordinator for MDHC, is delighted with the gift, which will go towards children's programming. Plans are to use the money to purchase items on their "wish list" which includes pottery supplies, paints, beads and much, much more. "The list is huge," Baker said.

"This really changes things for us," Baker said. "We will be able to enhance our existing programs and do more free programs, without having to charge for supplies. We have been able to reduce costs on programs due to donations and extra funding, but this will help even more."

MDHC was just gifted a kiln as well and is now looking for pottery wheels. Baker is also busy writing grants to fund more activities.

The Center offers children's programming all year and also does outreach programs at the Lodge and Crestwood Inn.

Jody Leland, Brew Fest committee member presents a $5000 check to Jenny Baker, education and outreach coordinator for the MonDak Heritage Center.

BAKKEN BORN. CONTINENTAL BRED.

Russ Atkins grew up on a farm in Montana and learned the meaning of a hard day's work gathering wheat in the rolling hills where Lewis and Clark once explored. He followed his own pioneering spirit when he joined the Continental Resources team as Production Engineer in 1997. Four promotions, 150 new hires and 900 wells later, Russ's nose-to-the-grindstone work ethic has helped to make the Bakken home for Continental Resources for a quarter century.

If you're ready to discover a future full of possibilities like Russ, consider Continental Resources for the career opportunity of a lifetime.

ABSOLUTE VINYL INC.

406-655-4468

We believe that good fences make good neighbors. And to uphold that belief, "We are always striving to be better." We have to ask, Why are you wanting to install a vinyl fence? Maintenance free right?

Sure it sounds so simple, but let us be very clear, not all vinyl fencing is the same and the companies you choose are not as well.

We are local and we have been prior to opening Absolute Vinyl Inc in 2002. We offer a product that is backed by a lifetime and transferable warranty up to 50 years. We install all of our yard fencing at 6ft centers which has the industry leading wind load rating starting at 135mph.

Our product and our installs have stood up to 126mph winds in Casper WY, the destructive winds that came with the tornado that tore off the roof of the Metra, and countless other winds in excess of 80mph.

If you are wanting maintenance free yet over time the finished project doesn't do its job, did you get what you wanted?

Also, aren't you purchasing the company that is installing your fence? Absolute vinyl Inc isn't here because of the boom, we have been here prior too and we will be here long after.

We are Absolute Vinyl Inc.
 We install Westech.

Thank you for the opportunity. Please call our shop at 406-655-4468. We will gather your information and get it to Lisa. Lisa is a busy mother and an active member of the community, so let our receptionist pass it on to her so Lisa can check her schedule and make a time that is convenient for you and her.

FFA – Enhancing Skills You Already Have

Emily Schaff

By Tie Shank
 2014 Sidney High School graduate Emily Schaff sets her sights on Rocky Mountain College in Billings, MT to pursue her educational goals and studies in Communication.

Growing up in Sidney, Schaff was involved in 4-H but wasn't raised on a farm or ranch. She became involved in the National FFA Organization during her 8th grade year due to the influence of her parents, Gary and Mary Schaff.

Her father, Gary, retired from Sidney schools this year after teaching Agriculture for the past 19 years and her mother, Mary, has worked at the Eastern Ag Research Center since 2006. Both her parents grew up on farms.

During her 8th grade year, Emily competed in The Creed Speaking competition during Leadership Day and took first place in the district. However she wasn't able to compete at the state level because she was not a high school student.

After this and throughout her high school years in FFA, she realized her potential in public speaking and was very involved in Prepared Public Speaking and in Extemporaneous Public Speaking competitions.

Schaff states, "I want others to know that FFA is not just a group of farm kids, or a group to hang out with. You don't have to live on a farm to be involved in FFA. FFA helps kids to harness talents and enhance skills they already have. They help kids prepare to be successful in life."

Schaff's career goal is to work for the National FFA Organization or the Montana FFA Organization. It sounds like she's off to a great start.

Guest Opinion:

One Year After GE Wheat Contamination, USDA has Failed to Protect Farmers, Wheat farmers and Advocates Demand Immediate Action from USDA

Submitted by Kevin Dowling

On the one-year anniversary of the Department of Agriculture's announcement of finding an unapproved, genetically engineered (GE) wheat in an Oregon field, farmers and allies are demanding an end to the approval of GE traits until measures are adopted to protect non GE-farmers and their markets from contamination by GE crops. A 2013 FOIA request uncovered up to 483 total field trial violations, demonstrating the serious potential for future contamination episodes.

"We're still waiting for answers," says Clint Lindsey, an Oregon wheat grower whose shipments were put on hold last year after the unapproved wheat was found. "Crop genes move in the environment and cannot be fully contained, yet USDA continues to approve experimental wheat trials. We deserve assurances that our markets won't be halted again and put at risk."

Todd Leake, a North Dakota wheat grower and Dakota Resource Council member who farms more than 2,000 acres, is concerned about ongoing experimental field trials in his state.

"GE wheat field trials are underway in North Dakota, potentially covering more than 260 acres. Our export markets have zero tolerance for GE traits in wheat products – it's not a marketable commodity. If another contamination event surfaces, the consequences would be devastating. USDA must do its part to ensure that we don't lose our export markets to other countries."

After a decade of field trials, Monsanto dropped efforts to introduce GE wheat in 2004 in the face of intense opposition from consumers, farmers, wheat millers and food companies. However, after a six-year hiatus, Monsanto resumed extensive field-testing of GE wheat in 2011.

"USDA has continuously failed to protect the food supply from GE crop contamination," said Andrew Kimbrell, executive director for Center for Food Safety. "Our farmers and food supply are severely jeopardized by such contamination episodes, yet the biotech industry responsible faces no accountability and operates with little transparency. Swift action from USDA is desperately needed."

Records also reveal that 22 new GE wheat field trials have been approved since the department's announcement one year ago. These trials represent more than 960 acres spanning ten states. USDA is allowing Monsanto to conduct six of these trials, despite remaining questions as to how the company's product contaminated Oregon wheat last year.

"Contamination events happen far too frequently," says Kristina Hubbard of Organic Seed Alliance. She points to contaminated alfalfa identified in Washington State four months after the Oregon wheat contamination event. Soon after, China rejected a U.S. corn shipment containing a GE trait not approved for import. "Farmers, seed companies, and food processors are bearing the burden of contamination. Stronger regulations and oversight are long overdue to protect the integrity of seed – changes that must begin at the experimental field trial stage."

Opponents of GE wheat have long argued that it would contaminate conventional wheat, making it unsellable to many markets that reject GE products. A 2005 study estimated that the wheat industry could lose $94 to $272 million if GE wheat was introduced.

More than 150 farm organizations, food processors, millers, retail companies, bakeries, and seed businesses signed a letter last year calling for improvements in USDA's oversight of experimental trials of GE crops, including:

USDA should halt all new approvals of GE wheat field trials and terminate existing trials.

USDA should publish a final report before wheat harvests begin detailing the department's investigation into the Oregon wheat event, including sampling and testing methodologies.

Before approving field trials, USDA must have the appropriate tools in hand to test for unapproved GE traits in cases of suspected and confirmed contamination events.

USDA should mandate containment protocols for all GE crop field trials.

USDA should fully implement the remaining recommendations made by investigative bodies and Congress that aim to improve field trial oversight.

Watford City Hosts 'One Book Dakota' Project

Submitted by Jessie Veeder

In a joint effort with the South Dakota Humanities Council and the 125th Anniversary Committees from the states of North and South Dakota, the North Dakota Humanities Council will commemorate the entry of South and North Dakota into statehood with a special One Book collaboration.

"Dakota: A Spiritual Geography" by Kathleen Norris will serve as the joint One Book for the two states in 2014. The humanities councils in North and South Dakota will engage residents in literary programming based on Norris' New York Times bestselling book, in which she paints "a fine portrait of the High Plains and its people as well as a very personal memoir of a spiritual awakening," according to Publishers Weekly.

Norris will conduct a sixteen-city tour in North and South Dakota, arriving in Watford City, ND on Friday, June 13th. She will be presenting a reading and book signing at the Pioneer Museum, 5 p.m.

"The South Dakota Humanities Council is very pleased to be able to work with our neighboring state on this very special and unprecedented One Book collaboration," said Sherry DeBoer, executive director for the South Dakota Humanities Council. "We are excited to commemorate both states' heritage with the brilliant work of a tremendous author."

A joint special edition of the book has been printed and free copies are being distributed to libraries across both states. Statehood logos and language indicating the joint selection as the North and South Dakota One Book will appear on the front book cover. The North Dakota Humanities Council is also sponsoring book discussions in communities across the state focused on "Dakota."

"When Sherry called and asked if North Dakota wanted to partner on this project, I was thrilled," said Brenna Gerhardt, executive director of the North Dakota Humanities Council. "When it was written, Norris's book represented the Dakotas to the nation, and it still does. When I travel and tell people I'm from North Dakota, I often have people ask me if I've read 'Dakota.' Revisiting her book is a lot like looking in the mirror and thinking, 'Is this how people see us?' I'm curious to see if people will agree with the picture she paints of us or find it as appealing as people from outside our borders do."

Norris is an award-winning poet, writer, and author of The New York Times bestsellers "The Cloister Walk," "Amazing Grace: A Vocabulary of Faith," "The Virgin of Bennington" and the 2014 One Book, "Dakota: A Spiritual Geography." "Dakota" is a former New York Times Notable Book of the Year and was selected at the time of its printing as one of the best books of the year by Library Journal.

The San Francisco Sunday Examiner and Chronicle calls Norris "one of the most eloquent yet earthbound spiritual writers of our time."

Watford City will host a meet and greet with Kathleen Norris on Friday, June 13th at 5 p.m. at the Pioneer Museum of McKenzie County.

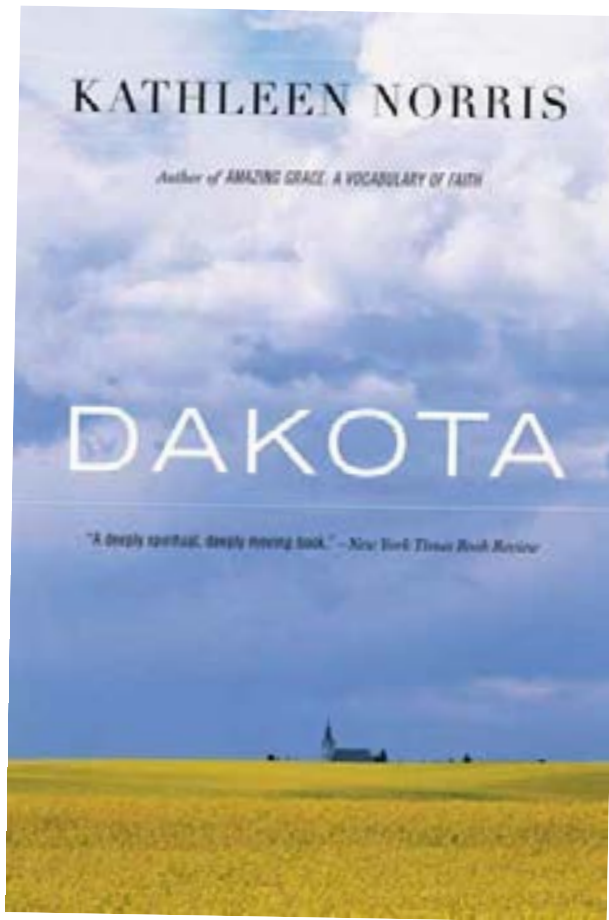

The Pioneer Museum of McKenzie County has received a grant from the North Dakota Humanities Council to distribute 25 copies of Norris' book "Dakota: A Spiritual Geography."

Area book clubs and residents are encouraged to pick up a copy and attend the June 13th event.

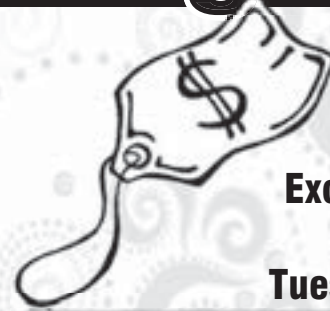

The event is free and open to the public. For more about the North Dakota Humanities Council and the One Book program, visit www.ndhumanities.org/.

To obtain a copy of "Dakota: A Spiritual Geography" by Kathleen Norris, contact Jessie Scofield at jessieveeder@gmail.com or stop by the Pioneer Museum of McKenzie County or the McKenzie County Public Library.

The full North Dakota tour includes:

DPHHS advises against eating raw Evergreen Fresh Sprouts-brand clover sprouts

Submitted by Jon Ebel

The Montana Department of Health and Human Services (DPHHS) is joining the states of Washington and Idaho in advising people NOT to eat raw clover sprouts produced by Evergreen Fresh Sprouts LLC of Idaho.

The sprouts have been linked to an outbreak of ten illness as of Escherichia coli, or E. coli, in Idaho and Washington. No confirmed cases have been reported in Montana at this time.

"Memorial Day weekend is a time people get together and eat, and enjoy the beauty of Montana. We are advising caution by urging folks not to eat these specific sprouts," said DPHHS Director Richard Oppen.

The suspect clover sprouts were distributed to several restaurants and grocery stores in Montana. However, state and local public health authorities have been working to notify recipients and believe the sprouts are no longer available for the public to purchase and consume.

Montana public health officials are working with local health jurisdictions, as well as Washington, Idaho, and federal agencies to ensure the safety of residents and visitors to Montana. DPHHS officials will provide additional information as the investigation progresses.

For more information about this developing situation, please visit www.dphhs.mt.gov.

Energy Roundup

Fed Up with Federal Lands Management

Submitted By David A. Galt, Montana Petroleum Association

There are several reasons Montana is lagging behind neighboring states when it comes to oil and gas development. While North Dakota maintains nearly 200 drilling rigs at any given time, Montana has struggled to keep rigs running. North Dakota issued over 2,500 drilling permits last year. Montana issued only 297. Considering these numbers, it should come as no surprise that North Dakota is producing around a million barrels a day, while Montana pumps out less than 80,000 barrels a day. So what gives?

Taxes, access, geology and regulatory climate all play a key role in a company's decision to deploy capital to a particular area.

Hurry Up & Wait

The Keystone XL pipeline delay provides a perfect example of the political reality of unnecessary and cumbersome delays waiting for approval of a project that is environmentally sound, and job generating. After five years and multiple Environmental Assessments that conclude the pipeline will not exacerbate greenhouse gas emissions, the Administration still refuses to approve the pipeline. Keystone XL is the poster child of many Federal land projects that linger for approval.

Federal lands and waters hold roughly 43 percent of all domestic oil reserves and 72 percent of oil shale acreage, according to the American Action Forum. But energy production has been stifled through lengthy permitting and more lands designated off-limits to oil and gas drilling.

Drilling Down on Federal Lands

According to the American Petroleum Institute, waiting for a federal permit can take more than 10 times longer than it does at the state level. In 2013, the average wait for the federal government to approve a request was 194 days, compared to two weeks in Montana (on State and fee land). Waiting for Federal lands to be reviewed prior to being offered for lease can take infinite amounts of time with no end in sight.

Total daily federal onshore oil production is only about one-third of what is produced every day at North Dakota's Bakken formation alone.

President Obama has often taken credit for the increased oil and gas production in the United States. Last year, however, the Obama administration sold the lowest amount of oil and gas leases since 1988 and approved the fewest drilling permits since 2002.

According to the Congressional Research Service, production on federal lands has fallen from 33.8 percent in 2009 to only 23 percent last year.

The share of U.S. oil production on federal lands has fallen to a five-year low, in spite of record development on state and private lands, which has increased 65 percent in the last seven years.

The Bureau of Land Management reported last month that federal land now accounts for only 5 percent of total oil production.

Who Owns the West

The United States Government has direct ownership of nearly 650 million acres, managed by several different government agencies including the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) which oversees more land than any other agency.

The BLM, created by the Department of the Interior in 1946, owns 247.3 million surface acres, and 700 million subsurface mineral acres (oil/natural gas).

"Federal land ownership is a huge impediment. There is no other way to put it. There is an artificial cap on energy production that is directly related to the result of federal land ownership," Cody Stewart, Energy Advisor to Governor Herbert (R-UT).

In Montana, 29.9% of lands are federally owned, while in North Dakota, only 3.9% of land is owned by the Federal government. Between Montana and the Dakotas, the BLM manages a landmass the size of Nebraska. Congress mandated the BLM to make public lands available for mineral leasing with the passage of the Mineral Act of 1920. The agency is required to hold four mineral lease sales a year in each BLM district.

Last year, 26 drilling permits were issued by the BLM on Federal Lands in Montana, down from 206 ten years earlier and 150 permits in 2007. In North Dakota, 255 permits to drill on Federal land were issued in 2013, up from 50 in 2003 and 72 in 2007.

Regulations

Resource development is heavily regulated at the state level, and by federal laws such as the Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act, and the Endangered Species Act, all of which continue to grow in reach and scope, not only on the oil and gas operators, but also the agricultural producers.

The Migratory Bird Treaty Act (1918) and the Endangered Species Act (1973) both aim to protect wildlife. Unfortunately, of the 2,105 species listed under the Endangered Species Act, only 1.3% has been delisted, according to the U.S Fish and Wildlife Service. Species are listed as endangered at the expense of business and employed tax payers. The spotted owl designation is a glaring example of defacto wilderness that destroyed large chunks of the timber industry.

When it comes to protecting wildlife, not all industries are treated the same. Wind farms kill about 440,000 birds a year. Last December, The Interior Department finalized a rule that would grant permits to let wind farms kill eagles for up to 30 years, six times longer than current permits allow. Can you imagine if similar 'permits to kill' were issued to producers of non-renewable energy sources? Instead, oil producers face five plus figure penalties and fines for harming any migratory or endangered bird.

Designations

According to the Montana Wilderness Association, The National Wilderness Preservation System currently comprises wilderness areas on 109,492,591 acres across the country, and 3,433,038 acres in Montana. Human activities in wilderness areas are restricted to scientific study and non-mechanized recreation; motorized vehicles and equipment are forbidden in these areas, limiting access for many Montanans.

When combined with the many other land use allocations and designations that remove federal lands from multiple use, such as National Parks, National Wildlife Refuges, Wild and Scenic Rivers, Wilderness Study Areas, National Monuments, and Forest Service Roadless Areas the total swells to 7,924,426 acres in Montana. Less than half of that Federal land is open to multiple-use activities that include natural resource development.

Enough is Enough

State and local economies must not be further encumbered in favor of sweeping defacto wilderness measures. Multiple use on public lands is key to economic development and sustainability in rural communities. The removal of any lands from multiple use status will disproportionately affect the counties and rural school districts surrounding the public land. The 49% Fed money that is turned back to the State and local communities is a huge miss when activity and access is denied to development. All too often, national park, wilderness, and monument rules are extended into buffer zones that continue to grow beyond the original designated boundaries.

Access to our natural resources is the key to a healthy local economy. Montanans are dependent upon access to the 30% of land ownership controlled by Washington. That access is being systematically denied to multiple use by people outside of Montana. Enough is enough.

R-CALF USA may be defined as a non-profit producer organization, but our work benefits anyone who eats meat and lives in an economy that includes agriculture. We're more than a producer organization, we're your organization!

Country-of-Origin Labeling (COOL): The fight's not over.

On May 19 the 11 judges in the D.C. appellate court heard the En Banc hearing on COOL. There is no time frame for when a decision must be made. Also, the decision by the World Trade Organization (WTO) regarding whether the final COOL rule complies with the WTO's international rules is expected in June. The WTO's decision will most likely be appealed.

Recently, Brazil reported a second case of BSE.

United States food safety inspectors confirmed that Brazil was not routinely removing all high-risk tissues for BSE as required for countries that export to the United States.

Despite Brazil's failure to meet U.S. food safety standards, FSIS officials nevertheless determined that Brazil "continues to meet FSIS equivalence criteria at an adequate level for this component (the specified risk material (SRM) removal component)."

R-CALF USA CEO Bill Bullard said these facts demonstrate the need to fully enforce the U.S. country-of-origin labeling (COOL) law. "Only with COOL can consumers choose to avoid purchasing their food from countries with questionable food safety systems," he said.

R-CALF USA is disappointed by the House Appropriations Committee's passage of the Agriculture Appropriations Bill. In an effort to encourage members of the appropriations committee to vote no, a group of nearly 200 organizations including R-CALF USA, sent letters to members of both the Senate and House Appropriations Committees urging them to reject any efforts in their upcoming 2015 Appropriations Bill to insert policy riders that would harm family farmers, ranchers and consumers.

Unfortunately, the work of the groups was not impactful enough to protect family farmers, ranchers and consumers. According to Bullard, "There is no better indicator of a totally dysfunctional Congress than when members of Congress actually vote to support retaliation against U.S. family farmers and ranchers, which is exactly what the House majority did today in their Appropriations Committee."

All letters, comments and presentations mentioned above are available at www.r-calfusa.com.

Make plans to attend the R-CALF USA Convention Aug. 29-30 in Cheyenne, Wyo, and hear from experts on issues affecting the U.S. cattle and sheep industries. For more information visit www.r-calfusa.com.

The Meat Racket is still for sale through R-CALF USA. We're able to offer it at the discounted price of $25 (retail $28). To order: Send $25 to R-CALF USA Box 30715, Billings, MT 59107 with The Meat Racket in the memo line or call 406-252-2516 and order with a credit card.

R-CALF USA is solely funded by donations and member dues. Please consider becoming a member. For more info or to join, go to www.r-calfusa.com, 406-252-2516.

DPHHS Computer Server Inappropriately Accessed - Agency Will Offer Free Credit Monitoring and Insurance

Submitted by Jon Ebelt

Officials with the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) said today that hackers gained entry to an agency computer server, though officials said there is no knowledge that information on the server was used inappropriately, or was even accessed.

The server contained personal client information that may have included names, addresses, dates of birth and Social Security numbers, dates of service, as well as clinical information. DPHHS employee payroll information was also on the affected server and the information included names, Social Security numbers, and bank account information.

On May 22nd, an independent forensic investigation determined that the server had been hacked. The forensic investigation was ordered on May 15th when suspicious activity was first detected by DPHHS officials. When the suspicious activity was discovered, agency officials also immediately shut down the server and contacted law enforcement.

"Out of an abundance of caution, we are taking the necessary steps to reach out to those whose information may have been stored on the server," Opper said. "We apologize for the stress this announcement is going to cause. DPHHS is committed to answering questions clients and employees may have and to help them to take advantage of the services we are offering."

Today, DPHHS released this information:

A toll-free DPHHS Help Line to allow people the opportunity to ask questions. The number is 800-809-2956.

In addition, the investigation also revealed that the server was likely first accessed in July 2013. However, DPHHS only became aware of a potential issue in May 2014.

The server that was hacked into has been shut down and is now off the state computer system. A new server containing backup files from the old server has been scanned and is safely being brought online.

DPHHS has purchased additional security software to better protect sensitive information on existing servers.

As part of an internal investigation, DPHHS is reviewing existing policies and procedures to determine how to prevent this from happening again in the future.

DPHHS is in the process of mailing letters to those clients and agency employees whose personal information could have been in the server. The letter will include instructions about how to sign up for free credit monitoring and insurance offered by the state.

However, until letters are sent, DPHHS understands that Montanans will have questions now about this unfortunate situation. To help address those questions, a toll free DPHHS Help Line has set up specifically dedicated to the agency response. Additional information is also available on the DPHHS website.

If anyone believes they were affected, but have not received a letter by the end of June, they are advised to call 800-809-2956.
