Beware of this Recent Fundraising Scam

By Meagan Dotson

A scam was reported to police by a local business last week. The business was called by a Alex Baldwin with Touchdown Sports who told them that they had worked with organizations out of Billings, MT and in the surrounding area. They were currently doing fundraising for Sidney Eagles boys and girls basketball teams, and would be printing 500 shirts to be sold by the cheerleaders during the games. The "representative" even mentioned the cheerleading coach by name and knew the team colors.

The "representative" went on to explain that each shirt would have the Sidney Eagles' mascot on the front, and that they were selling ads for the back of the shirt in three different sizes, which included a larger, featured ad. The "representative" told the business that if they purchased advertising on the shirts, no other business offering the same service would be contacted.

Enticed by the unique advertising opportunity, and a chance to support local sports teams, the business agreed. The "representative" said that although the business was paying by check, a credit card would still need to be kept on file, which is not an unusual business practice. However, the business received another call, with the "representative" notifying them that the card had, in fact, been charged and that as soon as the check was received, the card would be reimbursed.

The business manager felt the call was unusual, and so contacted the cheerleading coach to confirm, however neither the cheer leading coach nor the Athletic Director knew anything about such a fundraiser. The business manager then contacted police to report the scam.

Please be aware of anyone calling under the former pretenses. If anyone feels that they have been a victim of this scam, please contact the Sidney Police Department at 406-433-2210.

Sidney Welcomes City Clerk/ Treasurer Deputy Sasha Milender

By Meagan Dotson

The City of Sidney welcomed Sasha Milender as their City Clerk/Treasurer Deputy on Monday, Sept. 26th. Milender was hired for the new position after the city council approved combining the position of City Clerk and Treasurer at a Sept. 6th meeting, with the stipulation that they would hire a City Clerk/Treasurer Deputy to assist with the responsibilities of the combined position.

Milender moved to the area in 1998 and graduated from Sidney Senior High School in 2006. She worked at Oakland Construction for two years in their office, but was impacted by layoffs caused by the downturn of oil activity. She then did fill-in pipeline work for a couple of months before applying for the city position.

"The staff is extremely friendly and great to work with and I am really excited knowing that I can assist in helping the city of Sidney," said Milender. "I like going to the committee meetings and hearing the great ideas people have on how to make things better. It's been exciting to see the changes in town over the years like the bike path and the expansion of the high school. I enjoy seeing growth and improvement and I'm glad I get to be involved in that."

While the position is still new and details are still being worked out, Milender's position is to assist City Clerk/Treasurer Jessie Redfield by helping with payroll, attending meetings and taking minutes, preparing meeting agendas, and assisting at the front desk.

"We're all very excited to have Sasha at City Hall. She's a great fit in the office and is doing very well in the position. Hiring a City Clerk/Treasurer Deputy seems to be the right choice," Redfield commented.

Both Milender and Redfield are happy to be working together and serving the best interest of Sidney and it's residents.

Ghosts Walk in Virginia

By Lois Stephens

It's October, which means the fall decorations have made an appearance, most of them dealing with the Halloween theme. Halloween now ranks second, just behind Christmas, for the amount of money spent on decorations and other paraphernalia for this fall celebration. I know that Virginia City goes all out for Halloween. Decorations show up all over town by the first of October, and by the end of the month, candy abounds, people attend parties, and some businesses or individuals plan fright nights or have haunted houses open for the public. The air seems almost as festive as Christmas.

When I first moved here, I was astounded at the length some individuals and businesses went to in order to commemorate Halloween. However, after living here a few years, I think Virginia City has numerous ghosts that still walk the boardwalk and inhabit buildings all over town. Most of the older homes and structures have at least one ghost legend attached to them, and several buildings have multiple tales, stories, and sightings of paranormal activity that continue to this day. Locals have had supernatural or unexplained encounters with phantoms or spirits on many occasions, citizens have hair raising stories of their own to tell, and a few people believe beyond a shadow of a doubt that they share their house with a ghost or two. Everyone shares these stories freely. I have heard enough ghost tales since I moved to Virginia City that I could write a small book sharing these stories with others. This explains to me why Halloween has become an integral part of Virginia City. I also have become intimately familiar with many of these tales, as I hosted the Virginia City ghost walks two nights a week all summer long.

Let me explain that Virginia City in the off season may be considered a ghost town anyway. Less than 200 of us live here year round, and after the tourists pack it in and winter arrives, a person could walk down the middle of main street, stop and lay down for a nap, and not worry in the slightest about any vehicle running her over. In this town, traffic and people don't really seem to exist during the months from October to April.

Virginia City's Wallace Street, the main drag through town, has boardwalks for four blocks, up and down the business district. The boards on this makeshift sidewalk creak and groan under the weight of people moving up and down the street. One person alone walking down the boardwalk will cause the boards to squeak and grumble. Consequently, no one can step along this boardwalk silently.

Since October has arrived and we approach another Halloween, I want to share just one of the many ghost stories I've heard, this one from a man who has lived here for decades. In that time he has experienced the unexplained on multiple occasions. He has several strange tales to tell of experiences he has had in Virginia City.

Like most good ghost stories, this one occurred late at night on the main business street in Virginia City. The characters in this ghost story include the local citizen who had this eerie experience whom I will name Bill, a town dog called Hector that roamed freely and that was well known and liked by all the locals, and of course the apparition that chose to frequent the downtown area on this particular night.

Bill had spent the evening at the rehearsal hall making repairs to the building. He finished his work sometime after midnight, took a short cut through an alley to Wallace, and proceeded down the boardwalk towards his home. He hadn't traveled a block when he thought he heard footsteps behind him. He stopped, turned to look, and saw nothing but empty boardwalk on either side of the street. He continued on his journey towards home when again he heard footfalls behind him. For a second time he stopped to survey the town behind him, and he saw nothing. Slightly unnerved by now, Bill quickened his pace. He heard fast footfalls behind him so for the third time he once again stopped to peer in all directions. He saw nothing on his side of the street, but he saw motion several blocks away on the other side of the street, much too far away to explain the footsteps he had heard coming up behind him.

Watching closely, within moments Bill saw Hector, the town dog, approaching him at a fast clip. Hector ran across the street and straight to Bill, where the dog promptly planted himself firmly against Hector stared intently behind Bill. Slowly the dog pulled his lips away from his teeth and showed his fangs. The dog then began to growl deep in its throat. Hector's growl because louder, while at the same time his hackles rose straight up.

Although Bill could see nothing, he felt paralyzed by fear. Hector continued to growl, staring fixedly at something Bill could not see. A few moments later, Hector's gaze began to shift, and his head began to move as the dog watched something moving on down the boardwalk. Hector continued to growl and whine as his head slowly pivoted to watch whatever it was he could see or sense move away. Hector craned his neck, watched intently for another moment or two, then relaxed, stopped growling, gave Bill's hand a quick lick before he trotted away into the night.

So what did Bill hear? What did Hector see or sense that upset him so much he thought he needed to stand by Bill until the disturbance passed by? Bill has no idea, but he believes he encountered one of the many spirits that still walk the streets of Virginia City.

Happy Fright Night to all of you. Remember, the early bird may get the worm, but the night owl gets the candy.

The Peterson Memorial Senior Center Sees Improvements

The little hand-washing sink that started the remodel.

This island provides plenty of counter space and storage underneath.

By Meagan Dotson

Sidney Senior Citizens are back to using the Peterson Memorial Senior Center after about three weeks worth of renovations by B&B Builders. It all started with a hand washing sink that was needed to bring the building up to code; from there the center got an island with cabinets for storage underneath, new counter tops, a new dishwasher, and the building was also hooked up to city water which was a vast improvement from the well-water they'd been using.

During the upgrades, seniors met at Neil and Joann Williams home to play cards and hold potlucks; there are still flooring and baseboards to be installed, but members are back to their Thursday meetings, where they have a carry-in meal, play cards, and hold a once a month business meeting. Working through the Commission on Aging, the construction was paid for by Richland County.

"The commissioners have always been good to us," said Betty Norby, Senior Center President.

A group of seniors initially met in Sidney in 1969 and formed the Senior Citizens Chapter. For years the group met at various clubs, homes, and for a while in a church building acquired by the Heritage Museum. Then, in Sept. of 1998, Andrew and Emma Peterson, who had been very involved in the Senior Citizens Chapter, donated their home to the Sidney seniors. The home was sold, and the money used to purchase the former Baptist Congregation building at 813 3rd St. NE. The Peterson Memorial Senior Center is open from 1:00pm – 4:00pm on Thursdays and continues to be privately owned by its members.

Searching for a Richland County Homemaker

By Tie Shank

"You make a living by what you get, you make a life by what you give"—that quote rings very true for Richland County Commission on Aging's most recent homemaker. Linda Lunstad worked for more than a year providing contracted homemaking services (light duty housework) to elderly clients in Richland County. While this did tend to be a full-time job, it was much more than that to Linda-and to her clients. Linda recently moved away from Richland County but says she is still missing her job. "I just think it's one of the most rewarding ways to make a living. I became friends with every one of the people I helped and they were a blessing to me, that was the hardest part about leaving for me." One of the customers receiving Homemaker services says they'll miss Linda for much the same reason, "She was just always so cheerful. Sometimes I looked forward to the company as much as I did getting my house clean." These sentiments are echoed routinely by all 62 clients on the homemaker list.

Linda not only left the area but also some big shoes to fill. Sadly, the Commission on Aging has been unable to find someone who can satisfactorily take up the post which leaves a big gap in the services to the elderly of Richland County. Many elderly clients depend on the homemaker service to do the things that they are no longer able to do. One client says, "I don't know how I would manage without the homemaker. It's too hard to keep up with the house on my own but I really don't want to leave it."

That is the goal of the program, to keep people living in their own homes for as long as possible. Unfortunately, without someone to fill the position, the program won't do much good. Linda says she can't understand why people aren't standing in line to be the next homemaker. "This is the best job in the world; I have hard time even calling it a job. It's contracted so you basically get to bid what YOU want to make per hour and you get to set your own schedule. On top of that, it's the single most rewarding thing most people will ever get the chance to do." Jodi Berry at the Commission on Aging says this is a program that is definitely missed in its absence. "We get a couple of calls every single day wondering how the search is going. It's hard when people have been counting on a service and it suddenly ends.

We just want to get someone up and running soon."

The Homemaker position has its advantages. Because it's not an employee position, prospective workers can bid what they feel is a fair hourly wage that encompasses all their expenses. Contractors do need to have reliable transportation to get to and from client's homes in Fairview, Savage, Sidney and Lambert and obtain their own workman's comp insurance policy. The program will supply all cleaning supplies and equipment. If you are interested in learning more about the Homemaker position, you can call the Commission on Aging at 433-3701.

Tester Delivers Good News for Veterans, Troops, Farmers & Ranchers

By Meagan Dotson

Senator Jon Tester held a press call on Thursday, Oct. 6th; Congress has recessed due to the pending election, leaving unresolved issues on the table such as the necessary appointment of a Supreme Court justice, Tester's Veteran's First Act, and a solution to wildfire funding, just to name a few.

However, Congress did pass an appropriations bill that will invest $3.3 billion in the VA, which will improve facilities, speed up disability appeals, strengthen telehealth services, increase medical research, and improve the treatment of traumatic brain injuries. Tester, who is one of two leading members on the Milcon VA Appropriations Subcommittee, is optimistic that the new legislation will allow for an increase of VA staff, and will improve VA services across the board for veterans and troops.

Additionally, $14.6 million was secured for a new missile maintenance facility at Malmstrom, along with a guarantee that the Red Horse Squadron will serve there for years to come.

"As Montana's senator I take all of my responsibilities seriously, but the responsibility we have to our troops is sacred. I am proud to have passed this bipartisan piece of legislation," Tester stated. "In Montana we have the 2nd highest per capita population of veterans, a statistic that we are all proud of."

Both the House of Representatives and the Senate also passed Tester's Barn Card Technology Act.

"With technology changing on the ranch it is time for our laws to reflect that. I heard it from ranchers from Willsall to Wibaux; the livestock auction laws in our country were antiquated and outdated. Farmers and ranchers already face enough obstacles trying to sell their product, they shouldn't have to worry about not being able to ask 'cash or credit?'," Tester commented.

The Barn Card Technology Act is legislation that is intended to modernize the livestock auction industry. This will make it possible to purchase livestock using debit and credit cards, rather than the current law, which only allows payment via check and wire transfers.

"I was glad to get some work done even in a broken Washington D.C. We may not have fixed the Choice program or given the Supreme Court the Justices they need, but we delivered for our troops and veterans and made life easier for Montana farmers and ranchers," he concluded.

A Steak in Ag

A Monthly Report by R-CALF USA

We now know the real reason country of origin labeling (COOL) was repealed was to help multinational meatpackers steal the good name and reputation of U.S. cattle producers and put it on beef from foreign-sourced cattle for duty-free distribution to Trans-Pacific Partnership free trade agreement (TPP) countries, including the United States. They can do this because the TPP states the origin of beef is wherever the animal is slaughtered. Your reputation is worth billions of dollars, and our own USDA helped gift this incredibly valuable asset to the multinational meatpackers. You got nothing.

The TPP destroys competition between the U.S. cattle industry and cattle industries from around the world. It will allow multinational packers to import cattle from Canada, Mexico and South America and put a "Product of the USA" label on the resulting beef. The current U.S. beef trade deficit with TPP countries was nearly $2.8 billion in 2015 alone. This ongoing deficit is weakening the U.S. cattle industry and it will become even weaker if Congress passes the TPP.

With both cattle supplies and beef production so low, and with steady beef demand, cattle prices were expected to remain at historical highs from 2015 until 2018, at which time herd rebuilding was projected to cause prices to gradually subside. But something went terribly wrong.

Recall June 2015 when the U.S. House of Representatives repealed COOL. Up until then fed cattle prices were steady and strong. But in June prices began to tumble and they are still tumbling today. Cattle prices never fell so far or so fast at any other time in the history of our industry.

Just between May - December 2015 U.S. cow/calf producers suffered a loss of over $506 per head! It is even worse now. This wasn't caused by competitive market fundamentals. No, this was the result of manipulation within our U.S. cattle market.

R-CALF USA asked for an investigation into the cause of the cattle price collapse. The U.S. Comptroller General agreed to conduct the investigation and it is underway right now.

No national organization is fighting harder or more effectively to prevent multinational meatpackers from chickenizing your U.S. cattle industry. R-CALF USA has been successfully fighting against this for 16 years and we're likely the only reason you still have independent farmer-feeders bidding against the multinationals for your feeder calves. But we need your support to fight even harder. We are worried that many more independent feeders and producers are continuing to exit our industry following the 2015-2016 price collapse.

Whether you are a small or large cow/calf producer, yearling operator or sheep producer, or a small or large feedlot operator, we work for your economic interests.

R-CALF USA may be defined as a non-profit producer organization, but our work benefits anyone who eats meat and those who live in an economy that includes agriculture. We're more than a producer organization; we're your organization!

BQA? Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) is a producer driven program in which cattle producers assume responsibility for producing beef that is a healthy, wholesome, quality product and free from defects such as injection-site lesions and bruises. Producers in BQA programs keep detailed records of husbandry practices and treatments performed on their cattle, Further, producers involved in BQA programs assure their management, husbandry and animal health practices meet regulatory and industry standards for these practices. The history behind BQA dates back over thirty years when cattlemen began investigating ways to ensure their production practices were safe. The United States Department of Agriculture- Food Safety Inspection Service has commended the National BQA Program, as 47 states are in involved in the continue to allow the industry needed flexibility to produce safe and wholesome food in an economical manner. In the 1980s, the demand for beef in the United States dropped dramatically. The beef industry began investigating the reasons, overwhelming conclusion was that consumers were not satisfied with the end product. North Dakota is one of the 47 states that is involved in this voluntary program and it is coming to Williams County. On Wednesday November 30th, at the Pinnacle in Tioga there will be a BQA training. Lisa Pederson, NDSU Extension Service Beef Quality Specialist will be there to offer the training and the certificate. Over the next few weeks I will be mentioning more about this program and the other speakers that will be present. Any questions in the meantime, call 701-577-4595.

Land Reclamation

As we have seen over the last few months, oil production in northwest North Dakota a great time to learn and discuss what is going to happen in the future. On Wednesday November 2nd, there will be a Land Reclamation meeting hosted by Williams County Extension Service, Williams County Soil Conservation District and the Natural Resource Conservation District. This event will be held at the Ernie French Center at the Williston Research Extension Center, 14120 Hwy 2 Williston. This program will have presentations about local research done by Austin Link and Chris Augustin if cropping systems is a good way to restore pipeline. Kevin Sedivec, NDSU Extension Service state range specialist will explain what can be done before a pipeline to help create a smooth reclamation process and David Saxowsky to discuss what landowners need to know before signing a lease. We will also be welcoming the North Dakota Department of Agriculture to discuss their Pipeline Restoration and Reclamation Oversight Program. New Pulse Crop Facility Makes Gains & Increases Capacity

Glendive, MT is home to a new pulse crop receiving and transportation facility, established by ITC International Inc. Based out of Canada, ITC International Inc. provides a diverse range of pulse crop products to 20-25 markets, and partnered with the Montana Department of Agriculture and Mid-Rivers' Community Resource Specialist Kathy McLane, to establish the pulse crop facility which opened August 8, 2016. Additionally, they worked closely with MSU Extension, BNSF Railway, and local producers

Sponsors are Wanted for the 2016 Bovine Connection

By Meagan Dotson

The 2016 Bovine Connection will be held Tuesday, Nov. 29th, at the Culbertson Saddle Club in Culbertson, MT, and they are looking for supporting sponsors. The Bovine Connection was formed by MSU Extension, NDSU Extension, and industry leaders and focuses on benefitting cattle producers in northeastern Montana and northwestern North Dakota. They provide livestock operators with current information, an opportunity to listen to experts in their field, and a great networking opportunity.

This year's featured speaker Dave Pratt of Ranch Management Consultants will present "Ranching for Profits Workshop". Other expert speakers include NDSU Extension Beef Quality Assurance Specialist Lisa Pederson, NDSU Livestock Stewardship Specialist Dr. Gerald Stokka, and Dr. Andrew Roberts with the USDA-ARS Range and Livestock Experiment Station out of Miles City, MT.

A $50 sponsorship includes a ticket to the event, acknowledgement in the promotional package, and the option of setting up a poster or banner for the sponsoring business. Doors will open at 8:00am for set-up and the program begins at 9:00am. To ensure that sponsoring businesses will be included in the Proceedings Packet, sponsorship forms need to be returned by Oct. 18th. Sponsorships will be accepted after this date, however, there will be no guarantee that those will be included in the Proceedings Packet.

To sponsor the 2016 Bovine Connection, or for more inforand businesses.

ITC International Inc. looked at many different areas in the state, and ultimately felt that Glendive was in a good proximity to pulse crop growing areas in eastern Montana. John Piracha, ITC International Inc.'s president commented that the company felt that there was a good scope for further improvement and development of pulse crops.

Montana has been the leading pulse crop producer in the US since 2011. In 2016 peas and lentils were grown on more than 1 million acres in the state with a 216,000 acre increase in the last year. Many farmers are choosing pulse crops due to the low wheat prices and many soil benefits that come with growing pulse crops.

The facility is designed to meet pulse crop's specific handling needs and area producers will no longer have to travel so far to deliver them. On-site storage bins can currently hold 40,000 bushels, with the goal being to have 100,000 tons of specialty crops per year going through the receiving facility.

ITC has contracted with local producers to grow specialty crops, and plans to add to that in the future. Piracha has been working with the USDA Research Center in Sidney, MT to find niche crops that would do well in the area, considering eastern Montana has a longer and warmer growing season.

"Once we identify those specialty crops, we would like to contract with Montanan and North Dakotan growers in the future," said Piracha. "As we progress we are considering what the community, county, and surrounding counties need, focusing on increasing our capacity to include processing, and how to increase pulse crop production in the area. We are constantly upgrading."

In the few weeks that the facility has been open, employees are keeping busy and have seen crops come in from as far as Plentywood, MT.

"We've gotten a good response from the community and we would like to thank everyone in Dawson County and the surrounding counties for their involvement," Piracha said. "As we go forward, we want to reach out to even more people."

The Canal Breach of 2016:

A Community Comes Together to Accomplish an Amazing Feat in Record Time

By Meagan Dotson

On Sunday, Aug. 21, phones started ringing. David Haverkamp placed a call to Lower Yellowstone Irrigation Project (LYIP) stating that they had noticed water bubbling out of the ground partway down the 45'-50' embankment that served as the main irrigation canal's outside wall. A ditch rider was sent out, who first called Project Manager James Brower, and when he didn't answer, called the watermaster, Pat Micheletto. Micheletto then called Brower to tell him that the canal had breached

The 72-mile-long, 60' wide, and 11' deep lifeline to valley farmers was aushing water at speeds fast enough to create whitewater. In September of 2012, a number of trees and bushes had been cleared from the canal banks four miles south of Sidney, because the tree roots had formed a barrier that was interfering with drainage and destabilizing the canal bank. The canal banks had been terraced to remove tree roots and sheets of drain tile were installed, however no one suspected that any of the trees were so old that they would have roots deep enough to tap into the bottom of the canal. As the deep roots rotted away, a small trickle of water picked up speed, washing out more and more sand, until the ground became so saturated it gave way to the enormous water pressure. Chunks of the bank started to collapse, 100,000 cubic yards of dirt in all.

LYIP employees rushed to open up waste ways, including Crane Creek, Fox Creek, Lone Tree Creek, the Savage Creek waste way, and the Burns Creek waste way and they raised

Parts of Crane Creek flooded, and the Savage waste way washed out the culvert to Elk Island. While the Savage waste way was throttled, the Savage Fire Department assisted in locating boaters who would've otherwise been stranded and had their vehicles stranded.

Coffer dams were installed at County Roads 117 and 119, as well as at the repair site.

The gates at Intake were shut almost immediately, however it takes 24 hours for anything done at Intake to effect Bell Hill, the area where the breach occurred. LYIP had done all they could do to stop the water, but still it ran, fed by underground springs and canal walls that had spent the last couple of months absorbing water into the ground.

Dirt clogged drainage designed to handle small overflow. The water flooded the surrounding farmland, at 2 ½' – 3' deep; it was only contained by higher ground, county road 115 and MT Highway 16.

Sunday night LYIP worked to stop the water, prevent further homes from being flooded, and they cleaned dirt and trees out of culverts. On Monday morning, the four LYIP districts met and surveyed the damage.

Interstate Engineering dropped everything they were doing to survey the canal and have an estimated cost of repair ready that night. They immediately began staking the construction site, and only billed for their own necessary labor costs.

It would be nearly a half a million-dollar fix. District I had half of its water shut down, District II was completely dry, and LYIP Assistant Manager Bill Hamburg stands amid the water that flooded nearby farmland.

Savage and Intake were unaffected, however 2/3 of the LYIP were dry due to district sizes.

District II advised the LYIP not to spend the $485,000 to fix the canal immediately because they didn't feel their crops could be saved, and didn't want to see more money spent than was necessary. Then the other three districts stepped in, willing to pay an equal share to get the repairs going. They weren't prepared to see their neighboring communities take the loss of crops and finances without a fight.

Businesses stepped up, too. LYIP turned to Don Franz, owner of Franz Construction, who had experience repairing the LYIP Main Canal. He gave them a guaranteed bid of $485,000, regardless of how long the repair would take and of additional cost that could result if problems presented themselves during the repair. Franz also provided extra equipment each day to manage obstacles that could've caused delay.

Nortana Grain Co. bid fuel for Franz Construction without delivery charges in order to save irrigators as much money as they could. They came in substantially lower than any other bid, and left fuel tankers on-site so that construction wouldn't be held up waiting for deliveries.

The main canal had experienced three prior breaches in the same area, about every 25 -30 years. The consensus was to re-route that section of the canal, with the cooperation of a near-by landowner.

On Wednesday, Aug. 24th, the first day of construction, tragedy occurred. Franz employee Terry Klein was shot while operating his excavator. The construction site was now a crime scene and everything had to come to a halt while law enforcement gathered evidence.

Knowing that time was of the essence, LYIP employees moved scrap metal and debris by hand; they even disassembled a pole barn with little more than man power to ready the sight for the new section of canal. LYIP employees worked long consecutive days to ensure quick completion.

When construction resumed, Franz Construction employees worked in two shifts, 24 hours a day to finish the job.

"Terry Klein died trying to restore water service back to the farmers in time to save their crops, and I wanted to honor Terry's ultimate sacrifice by doing exactly that," said Franz of

A quarter million yards of dirt had to be moved for the new section of canal, but the soil was a perfect mix of silt and clay. Ten days after the breach was reported, the irrigation canal was functional again.

"I've worked irrigation for 25 years, in four districts, in three states, and I have never seen a community come together like this. I've never seen so many large private businesses give up their profit margin and sacrifice in order to save crops," said Brower. "The people who should've been screaming to spend the money to get it fixed didn't want us to spend the extra money in case it wasn't done in time to save their crops. The people who had water were the ones that insisted we do everything we could.' The Haverkamps land and home ended up with the most flooding, and LYIP relocated them to a hotel. Even they were concerned with the greater good, and insisted that LYIP get the canal up and running before any insurance claims were filed.

The day of completion, LYIP employees had their first opportunity in more than a week to go home early, but stayed in order to blade a driveway for the Haverkamps. They would later build them a new, gravel driveway.

"I'm proud to be a part of this community and I'm proud of what this community can accomplish in just a few days of working together. I'm especially proud of my employees; not one of them made a single complaint throughout the entire process. Even when they were working long hours day after day and into the night," added Brower.

LYIP would like to thank all of the businesses, landowners, board members, and individuals who worked together with them to make this repair in record time.

The excavation process would move a total of a quarter million yards of dirt for the new section of the canal. Photos were provided courtesy of Project Manager James Brower.

MSU to honor Jim Hagenbarth as Outstanding Agricultural Leader

By Jenny Lavey, MSU News Service

Jim Hagenbarth of Hagenbarth Livestock in Dillon has been named the 2016 Outstanding Agricultural Leader on behalf of Montana State University's College of Agriculture and Montana Agricultural Experiment Station. The public is invited to congratulate Hagenbarth at a Montana-made breakfast to be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, in MSU's South Gym of the Marga Hosaeus Fitness Center during the college's annual Celebrate Agriculture event scheduled for Nov. 11-12 at MSU.

MSU Vice President of Agriculture Charles Boyer said Hagenbarth is a successful and respected agriculture leader for Montana and a great example for current university agriculture

"Jim Hagenbarth represents some of the very best of Montana agriculture: commitment to the stewardship of land, resources and people and an impressive dedication to public service," Boyer said. "We're pleased to honor Jim with this award, not only for his family's successful livestock and ranching business, but because he has worked tirelessly to engage in difficult conversations and processes at local and national levels, to find common ground among diverse voices and agendas. In agriculture, that is not easy.'

The award is given annually to individuals or couples who are engaged and well-respected in the state's agricultural community. Recipients are those who have impacted many with their accomplishments, have a lifetime of achievement in agriculture, are industry leaders or innovative producers and are actively involved in the agricultural community.

Hagenbarth exhibits outstanding leadership in agricultural and public service to Montana and MSU, according to members of the selection committee. The Montana Stockgrowers Association and the MSU Department of Animal and Range Sciences nominated Hagenbarth for the award. Letters of support for his nomination were received from the United States Department of Agriculture, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks, the Department of Natural Resource Conservation and a host of Montana ranchers.

Nominators said Hagenbarth is well respected among livestock ranchers, wildlife and fisheries biologists, government agencies, special interest groups and watershed groups. They add that he has been an exemplary, composed leader in contentious and high-stakes natural resource discussions and as a farm and ranch policy advocate for Montana producers. He has also successfully forged private and public partnerships in species management protection and for natural resources at state and national levels.

Perhaps Hagenbarth's most notable influence, according to support letters, is his work with the Montana citizens working group for the Interagency Bison Management Plan, a cooperative, multi-agency effort that guides the management of bison and brucellosis in and around Yellowstone National Park. His work with this effort led him to testify before the U.S. Congress regarding Montana's cattle and bison interactions, particularly surrounding the brucellosis disease. Additionally, Hagenbarth has lobbied in Washington, D.C. for the Big Hole Watershed Committee, of which he was a founding member and currently serves as vice president. His dedication to the Upper Snake Sage-Grouse Local Working Group resulted in a 38-page plan drafted between citizen ranchers and state and federal agencies to increase sage-grouse populations in the upper Snake River region of Idaho. He has also been an invited speaker to numerous national conventions, including National Cattlemen's Beef Association and the First National Bison Symposium.

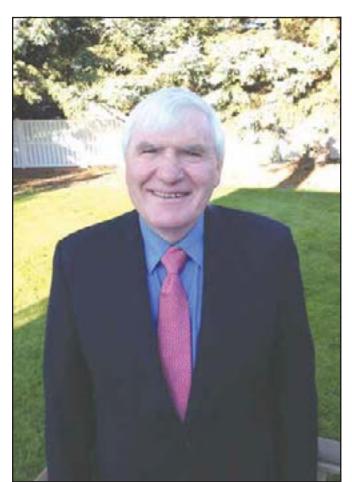

Hagenbarth is a volunteer on the Montana Board of Livestock, National Cattlemen's Association and the USDA-ARS Forage and Range Research lab in Logan, Utah. He has served as a research advisory council member of the Montana Agricultural Experiment Station and is active in the Knights of Columbus, National Cattlemen's Beef Association, Montana Stockgrowers Association and the St. Rose of Lima Catholic Church.

Hagenbarth's family history in Montana's sheep and cattle industries dates back to statehood, when Hagenbarth's grandfather managed 150,000 sheep and 500,000 cattle on nearly two million acres of range. Hagenbarth's family still owns and manages the 120 year-old cattle ranch today.

Hagenbarth received a bachelor's degree in business management from the University of Notre Dame before returning to work on his family's ranch.

Hagenbarth and his wife, Laurie, have three adult children: Mark, John and Kate.

The selection committee for the Outstanding Agricultural Leader award is comprised of three Montana agriculture representatives, a College of Agriculture faculty member and an MSU student. MSU's College of Agriculture has presented Outstanding Agricultural Leader awards since 1999.

MSU has named Jim Hagenbarth of Hagenbarth Livestock in Dillon the 2016 Outstanding Agricultural Leader. Those nominating Hagenbarth for the award say he has a long and respected history of public service in wildlife, range, conservation and water issues that has produced meaningful progress in the agricultural industry for Montana. October is Let's Talk Month

Can We Talk? This October Richland County Family Planning sponsors 'Let's Talk Month' to encourage Parent/ Child communication about sexual health and other topics that are important to both groups.

Parents are the first and most important educators in their children's lives. However, not all parents are comfortable with or have the resources to discuss difficult topics with their children. Often, parents want to talk to their son or daughter about different issues, but are afraid that they will not have the right answers and do not know where to get

'Let's Talk Month' is a national public education campaign celebrated every year in October, coordinated by Advocates for Youth, to help parents and their children navigate a path to a healthy life where young people can make healthy and responsible decisions. 'Let's Talk Month' equips parents with facts, advice and tips so parents can take advantage of the teachable moments that occur every day. Watching a TV show, the birth of a child, or a song with suggestive sexual lyrics are all moments parents and their children can use to discuss sexuality, dating violence, and sexting. These can also be opportunities to reinforce the family's values or religious

To celebrate 'Let's Talk Month', Richland County Family Planning is again organizing a pumpkin decorating contest for the month of October. Pumpkins can be decorated to address any topic that is important---but often avoided---such as texting and driving, dating violence, drug and alcohol use, as well as sexuality to name a few.

Any group or individual wanting to participate can take a decorated pumpkin to the Richland County Health Department during the month of October and complete a registration form. Prizes for most creative, most impactful message, and people's choice will be awarded on Monday, October 31 @ 10am. For more information, contact Lesley Thiessen at 406-433-2207 at the Richland County Health Department.

FWP Salmon Spawn on Fort Peck Reservoir has Begun

Fisheries crews began collecting adult Chinook salmon starting last week in hopes of collecting a large number of eggs, which will be raised to juveniles and released back into the reservoir in 2017. Crews are using electrofishing boats and targeting areas near the dam throughout October. Salmon do not naturally reproduce in Fort Peck Reservoir, making these efforts critical to the continuation of this fishery.

"Even though salmon have been observed in relatively shallow areas during the past few weeks, ideal spawning activity

Letter to the Editor

The E-rase your E-waste committee would like to thank everyone who participated in our 2016 E-rase your E-waste events in Sidney and Fairview this past spring and fall. The official results are now in for our fall event held Sept. 9-10 in Sidney where MonDak businesses and residents recycled another 22,471 pounds of electronic waste.

That brings the total for both our 2016 spring and fall events to 45,754 pounds - the 7th time in 12 years we've collected more than 44,000 pounds of e-waste in a single year! It also brings our grand total to more than 427,000 pounds of e-waste recycled since this program's inception 12 years ago. That's 213 TONS of e-waste that DIDN'T go into our local landfill!

Our thanks to everyone who makes this event possible every year: our participants, our volunteers, our local media, both print and broadcast, our sponsors and our e-cycler, Yellowstone Solutions Inc. of Billings, whose participation enables us to support a Montana business and still provide free e-cycling for our community.

The organizing committee also wants to extend a hearty thank you to the Richland County Solid Waste and Disaster and Emergency Services departments for providing the space along with logistical and financial support for our 2016 events, and the Montana Department of Environmental Quality for providing promotional support. It's a group effort every year, and we really appreciate everyone's commitment to keeping our community healthy and safe through this project.

Thanks, again, to everyone for making 2016 another successful year for e-cycling in the MonDak! Now on to our next milestone - reaching half a million pounds of e-waste recycled by our community by 2018.

See you next year! E-rase your E-waste Jackie Couture, Co-Chair Beth Redlin, Co-Chair

Election to the State Auditor's Office means the individual will serve as Insurance Commissioner for Montana. This person will play a critical role in setting policy which will effect nearly every man, woman, and child in our state. Whether through health, life, homeowners, automobile, workers' compensation insurance, or the myriad investment products available, everyone in our state is impacted by this office. The Auditor's Office provides for the licensing and oversight of the firms selling insurance and investment products and determines which products can be offered in our state as well as the prosecution of those found violating laws governing those products.

While the Auditor's Office does not set insurance rates, they do set the policy that dramatically impacts those rates. Many Montanans have watched as the Auditor's Office, assisted by my opponent, has put policies in place which have hurt Montana families and businesses. Our automobile insurance rates are the nation's second-highest, workers' compensation insurance rates are tenth-highest. The health insurance rates recently released have left many families facing premium increases anywhere from 30% to nearly 60%, and this is beyond last year's double-digit increases and does not even account for the increases in our

My opponent has embraced Obamacare and with it he has broken our health care system. Now that we know you cannot keep your doctor or your insurance, or save $2,500 a year on insurance, his solution is to turn the entire health care system over to the government under a "single payer" system.

I believe we have an obligation to focus on affordable access to health care for everyone. I have brought forth solutions and will continue to if elected-such as Health Care Sharing Ministries, Primary Care Provider Agreements, and access to insurance products across state lines. These common sense policies will decrease costs and remove the government from between you and your health care provider. I have proposed and passed many of these concepts in the Montana Legislature while serving as the Senate Majority Leader. Alternatively, under my opponent's watch health insurance rates have skyrocketed, and the Governor vetoed legislation which would have lowered health care costs and helped our families and businesses. The other important role that the Insurance Commissioner performs is sitting on the State Land Board. The Land Board is responsible for the management of roughly 5.2 million acres of state "school trust" lands and about 6 million acres of mineral rights. These lands are not to be confused with the U.S. Forest Service lands or any land owned by Montana Fish Wildlife and Parks as some would lead you to believe. The Land Board is made up of the Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of State, Auditor's Office, and the Superintendent of Schools. This group is constitutionally charged to manage those lands in perpetuity for the financial benefit of the Montana public schools. Any timber sale, agricultural lease, commercial lease, or pipeline easement on those lands needs to be approved by the Land Board. These lands are physically managed, however, by the Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation.

I think it is critical we have people on the Land Board with background in land management to ensure these lands generate the revenue as mandated by the constitution without degrading them, thereby reducing the recreational use and access which is so important to the people of Montana. I have that expertise and will always protect these lands for our schools' and citizens' use. I am asking for your support, your vote, and your assistance if elected, as our system only works with your participation.

has yet to take place," said Heath Headley, Fort Peck Reservoir biologist. "Similar to walleye, salmon spawning activity peaks when all the right conditions take place; primarily water temperatures and timing."

Ideal spawning temperatures are when water temperatures reach 55 degrees, which typically occurs around mid-October. This is also when crews see both the most fish and best equ quality. Early-on egg quality isn't as good due to warmer water temperatures, as Chinook salmon are a coldwater fish which require colder water for proper egg development. Water surface temperatures have been averaging 62 degrees over the last

Salmon were first introduced into Fort Peck Reservoir in 1983. Due to the abundance of their preferred forage fish, cisco. salmon have shown excellent growth, with males maturing in two to four years and females in three to four years. Crews are hoping for a good egg-collection year as salmon numbers, and size, caught by anglers have been quite good.

"Compared to last year, the salmon caught this year have been larger," said Headley. "This is due to a large year class that is continuing to grow and mature. Anglers may recall a large number of smaller, mature males last season. Much of this has to do with males maturing at an earlier age than females, which is typical in most fish species." Early indications suggest that there are larger fish with more females present, and most fish are averaging around 15 pounds.

Once the fish are collected, they are transferred to the Fort Peck Multispecies Fish Hatchery. Egg and milt are then extracted from females and males, respectively, and successfully fertilized offspring will be

Please be aware of fisheries crews and their electrofishing efforts, as they may be near areas where angling activities are taking place. Senator Daines Discussed the Need for a Continued FBI Presence in Richland County

Senator Steve Daines met with law enforcement Wednesday, Oct. 5th.

MNAXLP

By Meagan Dotson

Senator Steve Daines was in Sidney Oct. 5th; he met with local beet growers at Sidney Sugars, toured the Intake Lower Yellowstone Irrigation Project Diversion Dam, and held a roundtable discussion focused on the needs of law enforcement, specifically the continuing drug issues in the Bakken region, as well as the need for the temporary Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) agent presence in Sidney to be made permanent. Federal, state, county and local law enforcement agencies were in attendance.

Members and leaders of the community were invited to the open session of the discussion.

Sheriff John Dynneson, the County Attorney's Office, County Commissioners, and Mayor Rick Norby were just a few of those in agreement about the continued need for FBI presence in Sidney and Richland County.

"In many ways things are slowing down, but crime is not," commented Mayor Norby.

According to the Montana Board of Crime Control's Crime in Montana: 2013-2014 reports, Richland County has had 125 times the number of offenses in 2014 than it did in 2009. Sidney has also become a potential control point for drugs being trafficked into and out of the state. Having a federal presence in Richland County has been useful to local law enforcement in many ways, and has allowed federal crimes to be addressed without seeking the assistance from agents hundreds of miles

The temporary duty station is scheduled to end in July of 2017, and Senator Daines is taking an active interest in seeing it continue on a permanent basis. He has reached out to the Director of the FBI, James B. Comey on more than one occasion to impress upon him the importance of federal agents in Richland County.

While there is a permanent field office in Williston, ND, it serves a different judicial district, and agents across the state line are dealing with crime in that area.

"We believe strongly in having a physical presence in Sidney and we want to be an ally and a resource," said Senator Daines. "To the police, deputies, FBI, and Border Patrol, thank you for what you do. I want you to know that you have a strong supporter in in the state of Montana as well as in Washington D.C."
