Lewis & Clark Museum To Host Great Western Cattle Trail Drive Obelisks July 18

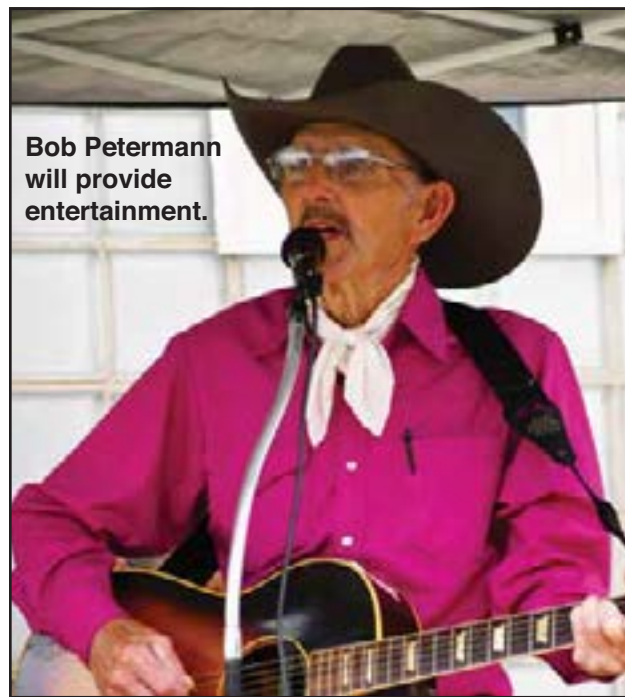

Lewis & Clark Museum, Alexander, will commemorate the Great Western Cattle Trail Drive, Sunday, July 18 at 2 p.m. The museum has been gifted with the honor of housing one of the many obelisks and a plaque celebrating the journey of millions of cattle and horses traveling from just south of Texas to Canada during 1870s-1890s.

Rotary Clubs from south Texas to North Dakota have teamed up to mark trails with cement obelisks every 6-10 miles and North Dakota is the third of nine states on the historical trail that began marking its area. The concrete 7-ft.-long white obelisks were donated by Stark County historian and businessman Scott Olin, Dickinson Ready Mix.

Bob Petermann will be the special entertainment and a short explanation of the trail will be presented by Kathy James and Kathy White. An ice cream social will follow.

The event is free.

This is a great opportunity to join as a member of the museum or renew your current membership.

Bob Petermann will provide entertainment.

The Lewis and Clark Museum, Alexander, will be hosting a special event Sunday, July 18 at 2 p.m. to commemorate the Great Western Cattle Trail Drive being marked with obelisks and a plaque being placed on their grounds to preserve Western Heritage. An ice cream social is set to follow.

Sidney Sidewalk Sales & "Off The Clock" Events Planned

The Sidney Area Chamber of Commerce will be hosting Sidney Sidewalk Sales on the third Friday of each month until October. Those dates are: July 16, Aug. 20 and Sept. 17. Participating businesses during Sidewalk Sales, will be extending their storefront on to the sidewalk and opening their shop from 7 a.m.-6 p.m.

Another of the summer shopping activities the chamber will be hosting "Off The Clock" monthly events while weather permits. "Off The Clock" will fall on the last Thursday of each month: July 29, Aug. 26 and Sept. 30. "Off The Clock" will feature live music, extended shopping hours, family friendly activities, pop-up shops, special sales and food vendors. "Off the Clock" tickets will be sold and ticket holders will receive a meal and a VIP Shopping Experience. The VIP Shopping Experience is generally an exclusive sale and a treat/beverage or store "swag". The plan is to close the first block of 2nd St. SE and hub most activities in that street and the city lot adjacent to it. The goal is to bring people to the storefronts and provide a nontraditional shopping experience for customers who may have various barriers to shopping local with the normal business hours. The time for the "Off The Clock" event will be 5-8 p.m.

Let the Sidney Area Chamber of Commerce know if you have any suggestions for either event as they welcome new ideas and effort to their trade and promotion committee.

If your business would be interested in participating in either of these events please complete the survey at <https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/sidneysales>.

WEEKLY FRAUD TIP

BROUGHT TO YOU BY  Stockman Bank

Things You Can Do To Avoid Fraud

- Spot imposters. Scammers pretend to be someone you can trust, or a company you do normal business with. Don't send money or give out personal information in response to an unexpected request.
- Do online searches. Search a company or product name with words like "review," "complaint," or "scam." Or search for phone numbers to see if other people have reported them as scams.
- Don't believe your caller ID. Technology makes it easy for scammers to fake caller ID info, so the name and number you see aren't always real.

nationals in 2019.

Brielle has been a member of the Sidney Tendo team since she was six years old. Her father, Jerrold, is a 3rd Dan and has been coaching her for the last three years. Jerrold also competed in Tae Kwon Do even into college at University of Montana.

Brielle has also been fortunate enough to have former Olympian, Steve Lambdin assisting her. Jerrold met Lambdin about five years ago through a connection of his from the university who got Lambdin to do a seminar in Missoula which the Baxters attended. Lambdin just happened to be in attendance at the Fort Worth tournament and was in Brielle's corner at the match.

"It's been fun watching her compete at her age. She far surpasses my abilities at her age. Her workouts are intense," says Dad.

Brielle also competes in cross country and basketball at Fairview Schools.

The Sidney Tendo team consists of between 20 and 30 kids and adults who have also attended national events. Mike Bergh is the Sidney Tendo team head coach.

With Local Entertainment, Roosevelt Memorial Healthcare Foundation Launching "Over The Moon" Gala

By Jaimee Green

The Roosevelt Memorial Healthcare Foundation is a go-for-launch for this year's version of the annual Fall Fest fundraiser. The "Over the Moon" Gala will take place on Oct. 9, at the Dry Prairie Rural Water Authority, Culbertson.

This year's theme is "Over the Moon" and it is going to be out of this world, literally! That's because attendees will embark on a flight destined for the lunar surface to enjoy an evening among the stars. At least it will look that way. Don't worry; there will be plenty of gravity and more importantly, plenty of heat to keep everyone warm on the moon's chilly surface!

The doors will open at 5:30 p.m. and dinner will be served to guests at 6:30 p.m.

The futuristic fundraiser will include hors d'oeuvres, a steak dinner with all the trimmings and the chance to win $1,000. Other prizes include a Traeger grill, artwork, gift cards and tickets to area entertainment while taking part in raffles, and both a silent and live auction.

The evening will conclude with a Meteor Shower Raffle with glowing raffle tickets dropping from an aircraft flying overhead.

The Foundation will also announce its Philanthropists of the Year with a special presentation.

This year's entertainment will include local community members such as Darcia Larsen, Ashlee Anderson, Elizabeth Hendrickson and Roosevelt Medical Center's very own Lunar Ladies and Moon Men. The show has been rated 'Best Performance' this side of Jupiter!

Tickets will cost $50 and be available beginning Aug. 2. Tickets will also be available at the door, but can be purchased at First Community Bank, the Wild West Diner and in the RMC lobby. Foundation members encourage those planning to attend to buy their tickets before they arrive at the event to assist with food planning.

Earthlings and interstellar beings are welcome and encouraged to dress formally but to include accessories like alien masks, glasses, or wigs, to name a few that represent their home planets and star systems. Of course, casual attire is perfectly acceptable too! Remember, those traveling from outside the Milky Way Galaxy will be screened for radiation.

The Foundation will be raising money to support

Roosevelt Medical Center, Culbertson, by replacing long-outdated commercial kitchen appliances. At the top of the needs list are a new stovetop, convection oven and steamer. They also need to replace cabinets and old Formica countertops for solid services that are easier to clean.

"For many of our residents, mealtime is one of the highlights of the day. Attending the "Over the Moon" Gala will help ensure mealtime at RMC is a special time for residents to gather and eat among friends and family," said Jaimee Green, RMC marketing and foundation director.

Importantly, all proceeds stay locally on Earth, more specifically, our community!

Since the first annual Fall Fest Fundraiser began in 2015, it has enabled the lab to purchase needed diagnostic equipment and paid for the installation of new facility flooring throughout the building and the installation of a patient's call light system.

For more information or to become a sponsor, call Jaimee Green at 406-787-6476, or email jgreen@roosmem.org.

Sidney Tiger Sharks Results

Plentywood Invitational July 10 & 11

The Sidney Tiger Sharks had a great meet this weekend at Plentywood. They took 55 swimmers to Plentywood. It was a smaller meet, but the sharks looked strong in the water. Many swimmers cut a lot of time this weekend and are priming for a good showing for the upcoming Sidney meet and then divisionals in Lewistown the following weekend. There is high hopes for the swimmers and planning on all of them making it to State, especially if they continue to cut time the way they have been. There were many high point winners and 2nd and 3rd place winners.

MSU EARC Field Day Slated For July 20

By Anna Dragseth
The MSU Eastern Agricultural Research Center Irrigated Farm Field Day is scheduled for Tuesday, July 20. It is located one mile north of Sidney. Registration will begin at 8 a.m. with the tour following at 8:30 a.m. There will be many featured speakers and topics discussed at this event. Topics will include plant breeding and newly developed varieties for wheat, barley, durum, pea, lentil, and chickpea; herbicide resistant weed control in sugar beets and other crops; disease management in cereal, pulse, and sugar beet and grasshopper issues. EARC agronomists will also present results of sugar beet and pulse crop research, and industrial partners will give updates on the sugar beet industry and pulse protein market.

Chengci Chen, EARC Superintendent, is excited to have field days back to normal. He said, "We'll celebrate the recovery from COVID-19 pandemic. With a great support and sponsorship from our local businesses and Northern Pulse Growers Association, we'll cook outdoors and serve steak for lunch this year. The director of Montana Agricultural Experiment Station will give an update on the College of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station. Our industrial partners will also give update on sugar beet industry and pea protein market." The EARC will also hold a Montana Agricultural Experiment Station summer conference following the field tour. The administrators from College of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Station, and researchers from all seven research centers will meet at EARC to discuss various topics. The EARC would like to thank their growers, legislators, Montana Wheat and Barley Committee, Montana Department of Agriculture, Montana Pulse Crop Committee, Northern Pulse Growers Association, US Dry Pea and Lentil Council, local and regional Pulse Crop and other businesses for their continuous support to agricultural research at the Eastern Agricultural Research Center and Montana State University. For more information on this event, call EARC at 406-433-2208.

Shergill To Discuss Herbicide Resistant Weeds At EARC Field Day

By Anna Dragseth
Dr. Lovreet Shergill, Montana State University assistant professor and weed scientist, will be speaking about management of herbicide resistant weeds in sugarbeet cropping systems in Montana at 12:50 p.m.

Shergill works to better understand crop-weed dynamics. He knows that weed control is a critical part of sugarbeet production. For both short term and long-term profitability, proper timing and responsible herbicide usage to avoid resistant weeds is critical. Being timely with herbicide applications gives the herbicide the greatest impact for control; it is better to control small weeds rather than larger ones even when using Round-up®/Glyphosate.

It is best to scout fields to identify escapes, tank mix herbicides with different modes of action (MOA), and rotate herbicide MOA in consecutive years.

Shergill's research aims to prevent weed seed production. He looks at crop-weed dynamics in different cropping systems that improve weed management and ultimately enhance crop productivity.

He has performed research on concerns about weeds becoming resistant to HWSC. His research results showed that growers have to be integrated into large-scale, on-farm research and development activities aimed at alleviating the problems of using HWSC systems and drive greater adoption subsequently.

The primary goal of his research is to address the ever-increasing problem of herbicide-resistant weeds by developing integrated weed management (IWM) programs that include a mixture of chemical methods such as residual herbicides, and herbicide mixtures with effective SOA, cultural methods such as crop-weed competition, crop rotations, and cover crops, and mechanical methods such as tillage, and harvest weed-seed control (HWSC) tactics. Shergill's research interest focuses on weed ecology, weed biology, weed physiology, crop-weed population dynamics, and molecular biology.

By Anna Dragseth
Over the years, Montana State University (MSU) breeders have developed several wheat varieties and continue to do so. Dr. Jason Cook, MSU-Bozeman trait integration breeder and geneticist, will be speaking about the MSU spring wheat breeding program starting at 9-9:15 a.m. at EARC Field Day, July 20.

Cook will be providing an update on wheat varieties that are doing well in eastern Montana and sharing information on some of the new up and coming varieties that are coming out of the breeding program. He will focus on Hard Red Spring Wheat varieties and provide data on how well these different varieties yield, what their economic performance looks like out of the field, and share information on their grain protein content for quality purposes.

"The information that I will be talking about can be used by growers to decide what variety will best fit their operation," said Cook.

The MSU Wheat Breeding Program goal is to develop new varieties that increase yield and quality for its buyers and add genes that help provide disease and insect resistance.

"We develop new spring wheat varieties for Montana producers and do genetic studies to better understand the genetics that control the traits that we are interested in to help improve and increase productivity of spring wheat varieties in Montana," said Cook.

Cook has been working with the MSU spring wheat program since 2015 and prior to that, he was breeding wheat for a private company. He received his PhD at University of Wisconsin - Madison in plant breeding and plant genetics in 2009. Cook is knowledgeable of all aspects of the MSU plant-breeding program and has a track record of success in obtaining research funding and completing and publishing research projects. His on-going research focuses on the genes impacting wheat yield, wheat stem sawfly resistance, and fusarium head blight tolerance.

Going forward he will closely monitor wheat varieties to see what is doing best under severe drought conditions.

He said, "This is a contrast to the past 2-3 years where we have had quite a bit of rain. Drought is a big topic this year so I hope to be able to provide some research information on how well these different varieties are holding up to drought conditions."

Dr. Chengci Chen, MSU-EARC superintendent, will be speaking about the potential of industrial hemp crop in Montana at the EARC Field Day, July 20 at 9:45 a.m.

Since 2018, Montana farmers have been producing Industrial hemp - it has now become increasingly popular in Montana; farmers that are growing hemp are seeing both a demand and profit increase, while farmers who have never grown hemp before are rushing to plant it in their fields.

Industrial hemp is a variety of Cannabis sativa L. and is of the same plant species as marijuana. Hemp, however, has lower levels of the psychoactive compound THC (tetrahydrocannabinol). Hemp contains less than 0.3% THC, while marijuana has over 30% THC.

Variety selection, environment, and agronomic management can affect the concentration of CBD. As industrial hemp has not been grown in the United States for many years, data available from the earlier research is not suitable for today's agriculture. Because of this, scientists and researchers have started implementing trials of hemp at the Montana State University Eastern Agricultural Research Center, Sidney. Chen and Dr. Apurba Sutradhar, postdoctoral research associate, has been working on the hemp trials in an effort to see how profitable hemp can be in eastern Montana.

MSU's goal is to adapt hemp as a mainstream and/or rotational crop for industrial application. The main objective is to optimize cultivation practices for eastern Montana. Staff is evaluating germplasm, agronomic parameters, production/harvest for use as fiber, grain, and CBD, nutrient management, and performance of hemp under eastern Montana conditions.

Coyne To Discuss Yellow Pea Research At MSU EARC Field Day

By Anna Dragseth
Dr. Clarice Coyne will be speaking about increasing yellow pea seed protein yields by increasing seed protein concentration and total yield at the MSU EARC Field Day. She said, "We're conducting a multi-year field research study in Montana and Washington on the genetic control of pea seed protein concentrations targeting the plant-based protein market."
Coyne is a USDA Plant Germplasm Introduction and Testing Research Unit curator/geneticist in Pullman, WA. She specializes in curation and genetics of the USDA 22,000 accession collection of pea, lentil, chickpea, faba bean and related species plant genetic resources. She works in close collaboration with USDA pea and lentil breeder Dr. Rebecca McGee, Professor Dorrie Main, Dr. Yu Ma, both of Washington State University, and Dr. Chengci Chen, .
The main objective of her research is to identify new sources for high pea seed protein concentration and understand the genetic components to assist breeders in efficiently developing high yielding cultivars with high pea seed protein concentrations.
The research team is close to completing the pea seed protein concentration determination of the 2800 pea plots grown in 2019 and 2020. "Next, working with Dr. Mike Grusak's USDA, Fargo, lab, we'll determine the seed mineral nutrient concentrations in those 2800 plots. We'll be able to confirm the most important genes for stable production of peas with both high protein and high mineral nutrients like iron and zinc and high yield," added Coyne.
This research targets the MonDak growing region by conducting a three-year study in Montana with two field sites in Sidney and the Richland County area.
She said, "By conducting the field research here and analyzing the harvested seed protein concentrations,

Pictured is a pea protein experiment that is being conducted in Central Ferry, WA. Two WSU summer student research assistants, Stephanie Lively and Jonah Hart, are collecting data on seed yield components of the experimental 1482 pea plots. (Submitted photo)

Dr. Jamie Sherman, MSU-Bozeman barley breeder, will discuss improving Spring and Winter Barley for Montana.
